05 / THE DISTILLERY

The Distillery

The only Scotch triple-distilled, every single drop.

Auchentoshan sits at the foot of the Kilpatrick Hills on the edge of Clydebank, just outside Glasgow, and has been distilling since 1823. Known as Glasgow's malt and sometimes the breakfast whisky for its light, delicate character, it holds a genuinely unique distinction: it is the only Scotch whisky distillery to triple-distil all of its production, a practice more associated with Irish whiskey that produces an exceptionally smooth, fruity spirit.

The distillery survived a direct hit during the Clydebank Blitz of 1941, when bombing of the nearby shipyards destroyed a warehouse and over a million litres of maturing whisky. Today owned by Suntory, Auchentoshan is one of only a handful of surviving Lowland distilleries and the standard-bearer for the region's classic light, triple-distilled style.

The cask offered here is a ex-bourbon fill, approximately 15 years matured, held in HMRC-bonded storage at Alloa in Scotland. It comes to the platform at £75 per litre of alcohol, roughly £6,533 per cask, a spirit cost of £24.20 per 70cl bottle before tax.

1

A genuinely unique process

Auchentoshan is the only Scotch distillery to triple-distil every drop it makes. That single, defensible point of difference is easy to explain and easy to sell.

2

Lowland scarcity

The Lowlands are the least-represented of the mainland whisky regions, and Auchentoshan is one of only a few survivors, which underpins the rarity of its stock.

3

Smooth, accessible style

The triple-distilled, delicate character has broad appeal and a recognisable identity as Glasgow's own malt, helping resale demand.
